THE New York Times says: "One of the most valuable and beneficent results of the rebellion will be a Government which for the future shall be in harmony with the tendencies of the age and the genus of our people. For the greater portion of the last thirty years that of the United States has been a libel upon free institutions, and the determined foe to progress, either in kless or in material greatness, that did not give to Slavery the same area and moral and political power as Freedom. The North was to take | ting water core." This consists of a double nothing by virtue of its educated people, its literary culture, its inventive genius, commerce or wealth. The dead body and the live one were always to retain the same measure, fullness and strength, lest the balance between the sections should be inevitably overthrown. The inventive benin is now the prolific father of children and States. Population succeeds in exact ratio as the means of existence and comfort are supplied. Starting with an equal division of the population, the North left the South behind, just so soon as science and mechanical skill came to the aid of labor. Unable to compete in such a field, the South sought, by seizing the political power of Covernment, to hold in check, and finally to take place in a subordinate position an enterprising rival, that was both hated and feared. This superiority of the North was met in the only manner it the organic law, the Constitution of the greater strength in proportion in its weight. - Paterson (N. J.) We could not | ply. have a railway to the Pacific, because Freeiom would take the larger share of the advantage of such a work. We could not improve the navigation of a river, or render safe the harbor of a lake, no matter how vast its commerce, for the same reason .-Restraint, not expansion, must be the law at Washington, and characterize as far as possible every attribute or function of Government, as the only means of preserving the balance of power between the two sections.

"Such necessarily became the policy of the South from an Instinct of self-preservation, or rather for the preservation of its darling institution, Slavery. Our Government consequently had almost entirely ceased to represent the progressive spirit of the North, which was that of the age. It had nearly ceased to command the affection of more intolerable from the manner in which it was exercised. The men who had come amins-were as offensive from their personting the overthrow of Covernment, with the oath upon their lips for its preservation. Bronze Guns.

At the Rogers locomotive works, in Pater son, N. J., experiments are being made in a peculiar mode of casting bronze guns; and we are glad to find them likely to prove successful. Mr. Morris from Pittsburg, who has had large experience in the casting of the celebrated iron Columbiads for beavy fortification guns, is superintending the experiments. He is now turning his attention to applying the principal to the easting of bronze guns. These have hitherto been cast solid and the entire amount of metal of whatever caliber bored out afterward, thereby not only making much waste, but taking a vast amount of labor; and what is worse producing a gun, which on account of its oftness, is very soon destroyed, more especially, if rifled and using a winged or conical

Those guns cast for Mr. Morris, are cast hollow, with what is known as the "circulstube, one within the other the outer one being coated with some kind of loam and sand in the usual manner of making cores: and the inner one, being smaller, leaves a space between its exterior surface and the interior surface of the outer one. The inner tube does not quite reach to the boltom of the other, but leaves a space for a return passage. Water is conveyed during the casting and cooling of the gun into the mouth of the outer tube which forces its way toward the bottom, and returning rises and escapes in a hot condition. Some twenty-five feet head is used for this injection water.

The mold is also different from the ordin ary loam or the dry sand mold. It is composed of a mixture of Kaolin, clay, quartz and mica, the whole, when in combination, forming a perfectly fire-proof, and, at the same time, a very porous mold, leaving a free egress for the pent-up gases. This is, of itself, a desideratum in good casting.

The result of all this is a homogeneousness in the metal and therefore a greater capacity to bear strain-a harder surface for the abraiding action of the cone shot, and a

Presently her calm blue eves filled with tears. Then, one by one, in endless sequence, the pearly drops rained down her serone countenance until the curiosity of the spectators was satisfied, and each one murmured, "Hold, enough!" As a rule, we suppose the tears easily secreted affect beholders as little as they cost the lady shedding them.

KILLED AND WOUNDED IN THE WAR OF 1812.-From an article in the New York Historical Collections, prepared by Wm.
